

What is ALEC and How Does It Impact Public Education?

What started as a conservative alternative to the National Conference of State Legislators in 1973 as the American Legislative Exchange Council (ALEC), where state legislators and business men and women could convene and take a more reined in approach to government than the prevailing mood or practice, has blossomed into a full-fledged, state-oriented national legislative service bureau.

ALEC's origins emanated both from the Nixon and Reagan Administrations, which were frustrated by what they saw as the "we've always done it that way" government mentality, and were nurtured by a Who's Who of conservative icons:

- Paul Weyrich, who was instrumental in the re-election of Richard Nixon and the founding of the Heritage Foundation
- John Kasich, Governor of Ohio, former U.S. House Budget Committee Chairman, and Ohio State Senator
- John M. Engler, President of the Business Roundtable, three-term Michigan Governor, and Michigan State Senator and Representative
- Tommy Thompson, former Secretary of Health and Human Services and Wisconsin Governor, currently running in the Wisconsin Republican primary for the U.S. Senate
- Bob Kasten, former U.S. Senator and Congressman from Wisconsin
- Terry Branstad, current and former Iowa Governor
- James L. Buckley, former U.S. Senator from New York
- Jesse Helms, former U.S. Senator from North Carolina
- Phil Crane, former Congressman from Illinois

Today ALEC researches a broad range of educational, labor, international relations, civil justice, commerce, insurance, economic development, technology, energy, environmental, agricultural, health and human services, and tax and fiscal policy issues and drafts model legislation that governors and state legislators swoop up lock, stock and barrel, introduce and act on.

Education Governance a Cornerstone of ALEC's Agenda

As education is a foremost topic of ALEC, the list of education topics it has tackled is long and varied. From alternatives to public education to teacher tenure, teacher certification, teacher evaluation, collective bargaining, curriculum, funding, special education, student assessment and many more, plus others that affect the education business or culture. Local school board governance is a special target of ALEC. To see ALEC model legislation for education issues, go to http://www.alecexposed.org/wiki/ALEC_Exposed and http://www.commoncause.org/site/pp.asp?c=dkLNK1MQIwG&b=8072485.

In a March 2012 piece in Phi Delta Kappa's Kappan Magazine

http://www.kappanmagazine.org/content/93/6/51.full.pdf+html, co-authored by former NSBA General Counsel and current University of Wisconsin-Madison (UW-M) Dean of the School of Education Julie Underwood, and Julie F. Mead, Professor and Chair of the (UW-M) Department of Educational Leadership and Policy Analysis, they noted that privatization of public education – through vouchers, tax incentives for sending children to private schools, and charter schools operated by for-profit entities -- has been a long-standing objective of ALEC. According to Wisconsin State Assemblyman Mark Pocan,who attended a 2011 ALEC meeting, Florida, Indiana and New Jersey are model states for conservative policies to emulate in education. The Kappan piece also especially singled out local school boards:

"Common throughout the bills are proposals to decrease local control of schools by democratically elected school boards while increasing Access to all facets of education to private entities and corporations."

The reduction of the influence of local school districts and school boards or their outright elimination is the goal of several pieces of model legislation ALEC promotes, such as the Charter Schools Act, Innovation Schools and School Districts Act, Open Enrollment Act, Virtual Public Schools Act, and the Next Generation Charter Schools Act. Also on the state legislative front, the Kappan article chronicled the specific path of the model Virtual Public Schools Act in Tennessee. There, two large for-profit providers of virtual education, Connections Academy and K-12, Inc., played a large role in the model bill's creation through their ALEC affiliation. Two Tennessee state legislators, who are ALEC members of the Education Task Force, introduced the bill in the House and Senate in an almost word-for-word version of the ALEC proposal. The bill passed both houses, and shortly afterward K-12, Inc. won a no-bid contract to create the Tennessee Virtual Academy. Also, the Milwaukee Parental Choice Program legislation was based on a rubric in the 1985 ALEC Education Source Book, and in 2011 attempts to remove all income requirements for participating students in Milwaukee were framed in ALEC's Parental Choice Scholarship Program Act. That act was also the model for a voucher program enacted most recently in Indiana, the Choice Scholarship Program. ALEC strongly warns state legislators not to put all their "eggs in one basket" in one all-encompassing bill, but rather to introduce a dozen or more bills at once-as was done in Florida with 14 -- so that the opposition may be diverted.

ALEC Writes and Influences State Legislation

During its 39 years of existence ALEC claims to have provided models to states for almost 1,000 enacted bills. As a result, ALEC touts itself as the "state legislators' think tank," and "the only" state legislative organization that "adopts policies and creates model legislation for its members." It draws 2,000 state legislators or attendees in any given year to its meetings, with 40-50 percent being legislators and 50-60 percent corporate and conservative interests. This is where state lawmakers may rub elbows with corporate giants and conservative gurus. It also claims as many as a third of all state legislators nationwide, for the most part Republicans, as members of its legislative outreach network. Membership is obligatory to attend ALEC's confabs. How does ALEC take on this myriad of topics? The issues are tackled by what is termed "public-private task forces" made up of legislators, lobbyists, business people, association representatives and others, and each co-chaired by both a state legislator and corporate leader. Model legislation emerging from task force work must be supported by a majority of votes from both the legislator attendees as well as the corporate members. Recently the ALEC board vetoed an Education Task Force decision to reject the Common Core State Standards. According to the ALEC website <alec.org>:

"ALEC's national Task Forces serve as public-policy laboratories where legislators develop model policies to use across the country. The eight Task Forces commission research, publish issue papers, convene workshops and issue alerts, and serve as clearinghouses of information on free market policies in the states.

Unique to ALEC Task Forces is the public-private partnership, a synergistic alliance that identifies issues and then responds with common sense, results-oriented policies. Legislators welcome their private sector counterparts to the table as equals, working in unison to solve the challenges facing our nation. The centerpiece to the Task Forces is ALEC's model legislation. To date, ALEC has considered, written, and approved hundreds of model bills, resolutions, and policy statements..."

ALEC's theme is free-market, limited government, and its focus is on 10 initiatives: the Center for State Fiscal Reform; cutting crime and budgets; the Environmental Protection Agency's "regulatory train wreck;" expanding the law under the "new restatement of torts;" federal relations; the Health Care Freedom Initiative; international trade, prison overcrowding, "restore the balance;" and "sunshine" in state attorney contracts."

ALEC holds two primary meetings yearly, its annual meeting, to be held July 25-28 this year in Salt Lake City; and the States and Nation Policy Summit from November 28-30 in Washington, D.C. Task Forces are convened throughout the year.

ALEC Grades Public Education

Of particular interest to NSBA is ALEC's "Report Card on American Education,"http://www.alec.org/publications/report-card-on-american-education/ now in its 17th edition. It is described on their website as a "comprehensive overview of education achievement levels for 50 states and D.C., and what education policies states currently have in place and provides a roadmap for legislators to follow to bring about education excellence in their state" This report ranks the states as follows:

51. West Virginia

Overall the ALEC education agenda focuses on:

- Introducing market factors in schools, particularly the teaching profession
- Privatizing education through vouchers, charters and tax incentives
- Increasing student testing and reporting
- Reducing the influence of or eliminating local school districts and school boards

Because vouchers are a primary ALEC goal, to assist states in taking steps toward adopting them, the organization published School Choice and State Constitutions (Komer & Neily, 2007). States that subsequently adopted ALEC recommendations include Arizona, Indiana, Georgia, Louisiana and Oklahoma. This privatization goal is intended to segregate schools by academic ability and disability, ethnicity, economics, language and culture.

Kappan article authors Underwood and Mead suggest that champions of public education henceforth should pose the following questions when legislation is introduced:

- Is the sponsor a member of ALEC?
- Does the bill borrow from ALEC model legislation?
- What corporations had a hand in drafting the legislation?
- What interests would benefit or even profit from the bill's passage?

Other ALEC Issue Areas

Other reports ALEC has done concentrate on an overview of the organization itself, Environmental Protection Agency reform, post employee benefit plans, a comparison of "rich and poor" states, state budget reform, a State Legislator's Guide to Repeal of Obamacare, and critical questions legislators should ask about higher education in their state.

The 26-member ALEC Board of Directors is led by a Chairman, currently Representative Dave Frizzell of Indiana, and has members from Wisconsin, Utah, Rhode Island, North Carolina, Colorado, Mississippi, Louisiana, Virginia, Arkansas, Connecticut, Iowa, Georgia, South Carolina, Kansas, Nevada, Ohio, Tennessee, New York and Texas, and Indiana.

ALEC also has a five- member Board of Scholars that honors distinguished work and presumably provides a conduit for their work to be used by ALEC. It is led by Dr. Arthur Laffer, Chairman of Laffer Associates, an economic research and consulting firm. Other members are Stephen Moore, member of the Wall Street Journal editorial board and senior economics writer, who divides his time between Washington and New York; Victor Schwartz, partner in the Washington office of the Kansas City-based law firm of Shook, Hardy and Bacon, LLP., and general counsel to the American Tort Reform Association;

Dr. Arthur Vedder, Distinguished Professor of Economics at The Ohio University in Athens, Ohio, and also a current consultant to the Joint Economic Committee of the Congress; and Bob Williams, founder and Senior Fellow of the Evergreen Freedom Foundation, a public policy organization in Olympia, Washington.

Perhaps what is most instructive about ALEC is the list of U.S. businesses that fund its activities and compose its "private partner" membership. They participate at various levels in terms of monetary and support contributions. Corporate members may also contribute to states' scholarship funds, set up to reimburse legislators who travel to the ALEC meetings. ALEC meetings, paid for by corporate sponsors, have been described by attendees as "nothing short of lavish."

Public Awareness, Controversy Prompt ALEC Members To Leave

In the past, disagreeing with or opposing ALEC could be a lonely endeavor, and the person or group considered outliers. But, according to Wisconsin State Representataive Mark Pocan, today presents a totally different outlook. A coalition has been formed that challenges and publicizes ALEC's actions. It includes Bob Edgar, the head of Common Cause, Lisa Graves, the head of the Center for Media & Democracy (operator of the ALECexposed.org website), and representatives from People for the American Way, the League of Women Voters, anti-gun violence groups, environmental groups, AFSCME, and others.

When Florida teenager Travon Martin was allegedly shot and killed by crime watch volunteer George Zimmerman in a gated community in Sanford, Florida, ALEC garnered a dose of negative notoriety as the source of the "Stand Your Ground" model statute the Sunshine State enacted to empower volunteers to self patrol their neighborhoods. Subsequently, many large, high profile businesses have dropped out of ALEC and cancelled their membership status. They include, but may not be limited to:

- American Traffic Solutions
- Arizona Public Service Company
- Best Buy
- Blue Cross and Blue Shied
- Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Louisiana
- Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Texas
- Cargill, Inc.
- Coca-Cola Company
- CVS Caremark Corporation
- Dell, Inc.
- Fed Ex
- General Motors (GM)
- Hewlett-Packard
- Intuit, Inc.
- John Deere & Company
- Johnson & Johnson
- Kaplan Higher Education
- Kraft Food, Inc.

- Mars, Inc.
- McDonald's Corporation
- Miller Coors Brewing Company
- Pepsi-Cola
- Procter & Gamble
- Reed Elsevier, Inc.
- Scantron
- TicketMaster
- Walgreen's
- Wendy's
- YUM! Brands (owner of Kentucky Fried Chicken, Taco Bell, Pizza Hut, Long John Silver's and A & W)
